Contents

The papers of Catholics for a Changing Church and its predecessor, the Catholic Renewal Movement, notably executive committee papers and administrative papers, covering a range of different subjects pertaining to the management of the organisation; membership records including correspondence and a card index of members; papers highlighting the organisation's links with various other religious groups; subject files, including Humane Vitae, family planning, human rights, and the role of women; conferences organised by the Catholic Renewal Movement/Catholics for a Changing Church and other bodies; and various publications (leaflets, journals and books).

About the creator

The Catholic Renewal Movement was established in January 1969 with the principal aim of opposing Humane Vitae, a papal encyclical issued by Pope Paul VI outlining the Catholic Church's position on the issue of birth control. Its formation in the late 1960s was a response to the perceived failure of the Second Vatican Council (1962-1965) in reforming the Catholic Church, as well as a reflection of the liberalisation of sexual relations and increasing opposition to traditional authority in the wider society generally. In its early days, the Catholic Renewal Movement was undoubtedly a radical organisation within the Catholic Church. The London Ad-Hoc Group (the precursor to the Catholic Renewal Movement) used its influence to house priests suspended and evicted from their homes for opposing the papal encyclical. "Pray-ins" and "teach-ins" were organised in various towns, including Twickenham, Nottingham, Leatherhead and Leicester, to publicise its cause. The aims of this group were "to open up discussion so that a genuine theology of marriage will be built up through the experience of Catholic couples, and in a more general sense to bring Vatican II off paper into practice". Within a year, the movement had attracted 2000 followers, of whom 10% were estimated to be clergy.

The Catholic Renewal Movement developed into a movement whose broad aim was to challenge Church authority generally, leading it to campaign on a number of different fronts from the 1970s to the present day, notably the right of the laity in the running of the Church, limitations on papal authority, the need to accept guidance by the Holy Spirit rather than the Pope, women's ministry in the Church, clerical celibacy, family planning, and human rights issues. The Catholic Renewal Movement also campaigned in the field of education, publishing Anthony Spencer's report The Future of Catholic Education in England and Wales in 1971. After the National Pastoral Congress in 1980, however, it became increasingly more marginalised within the Church and, in November 1993, the organisation changed its name to Catholics for a Changing Church to avoid confusion with the Charismatic Renewal Movement.

The Catholics for a Changing Church is still in existence today, arranging annual conferences and publicising its views through its website and journal, RENEW.

Previous custodial history

Archive stored privately by John Mackerell.

Arrangement

For the most part, the archive reflects the original arrangement by the previous Catholics for a Changing Church archivist, John Mackerell, including files arranged chronologically and separate subject files running parallel to these chronological files. The structure of the catalogue is to a large extent artificial and is probably not a reflection of the hierarchical structure of the organisation. For example, the Administrative Papers are a useful term to describe the chronologically-filed papers and to make them distinct from the Executive Committee Papers, although there is significant overlap. This overlap is also apparent in the Subject Files and the Conference Papers which duplicate material in the Administrative Papers. It was felt that this duplication would be to the benefit of researchers who may be interested in a particular topic rather than the history of the organisation, and who would therefore find various access points into the material. The printed publications have been catalogued using a different system and are available on the main university library catalogue. The arrangement of the archive is as follows:

1. Executive Committee Papers (D4/A)
2. Administrative Papers (D4/B)
3. Membership Papers (D4/C)
4. Papers of External Organisations (D4/D)
5. Subject Files (D4/E)
6. Conference Papers (D4/F)
7. Publications (D4/G)

Conditions of access

There is restricted access to records less than 30 years old, with some further restrictions, generally as noted, on records less than 80 years old where the Data Protection Act applies.

Copyright and copying

Permission to make any published use of material from the collection must be sought in advance from pg.library@durham.ac.uk and, where appropriate, from the copyright owner. The Library will assist where possible with identifying copyright owners, but responsibility for ensuring copyright clearance rests with the user of the material

Appraisal

The collection has been appraised. Information which is duplicated in other records, and clean duplicates, have generally been removed.

Accruals

Catholics for a Changing Church is an active organisation so further accruals are expected.

Form of citation

The form of citation should use the code GB-0033-CSU-D4, or the collection name Catholics for a Changing Church Archive, followed by the reference number

To order items in the searchroom, use the collection reference code(s), derived by removing the repository code (GB-0033-), followed by the reference number. Citing the section of the finding aid is useful.
