Introduction

Collection title: Ushaw Library Manuscript Volumes

Dates of creation: 1450-1949

Extent: 98 volumes

Repository: Ushaw College Library

Language of material: Latin and English

Contents

The Ushaw Library Manuscript Volumes collection encompasses the relatively small number of individual manuscript volumes that have been shelved alongside the printed items in the various libraries at Ushaw (including the Big Library, Lisbon Library and Lower Library). In the case of those items located in Bay XVIII, these include some of the most important single items held by Ushaw College. A great proportion of the Bay XVIII collection is students' dictates (the daily method of teaching in the English seminaries was daily dictation). These dictates are mostly from the English College in Douai with some from Ushaw College. The dictates are bound, although the binding is often of a much later date than the manuscript, and it is likely that they were subsequently reworked by the student at a later point in time. A number of the volumes are also manuscript copies of other works, mostly rare, on the subject of recusant history, religious controversy or devotional works from monasteries and convents. Finally, there are also a handful of volumes pertaining to other aspects of the history of the English College in Douai and Ushaw College, including diaries and rule books. Manuscript volumes located in other bays cover a wide range of subjects, including missionary activity in the Far East in the thirteenth century, papal history, catalogues, seventeenth-century Jansenism, miracles, legal documents including precedents from the Courts of Chancery, Catholic emancipation

About the creator
